Michelle joined BC PSLS in 2005 and has filled several key communications and management roles throughout the evolution of the system across the province. Today, as Communications Specialist, she oversees strategic and tactical communications, and is the editor-in-chief of the BC PSLS blog. She also presents on behalf of BC PSLS, manages social media, fosters stakeholder relations, directs administrative operations, and serves as the main point of contact for internal and external clients.

Michelle completed her Master of Arts degree in Professional Communications from Royal Roads University in 2013, and is currently pursuing Communications Management Professional (CMP) certification through the Global Communication Certification Council (GCCC). She has an extensive history with the Provincial Health Services Authority (PHSA).

“Being part of an innovative project like BC PSLS from day one has been inspiring. Over time, we’ve built meaningful partnerships with stakeholders around the province – others who, like us, are committed to building a safer healthcare system. I will do everything I can to support the vision of BC PSLS, so we can continue to deliver optimal tools to BC’s healthcare providers, and I can continue to tell their stories.”
